Q1: Read the conversation, then answer questions below:

Father: George, I want you to drive slowly and carefully, and put on your seat belt. We have plenty of time.

George: What time is your flight, Dad?

Father: At 6:00 p.m.

George: That's in 3 hours! You have 2 extra hours. The trip to the airport is less than an hour.

Father: You should always arrive at least two hours before departure. We might run into traffic at this time of day. Why are we taking this road?

George: Because it's quicker.

Father: You can't be serious! You should use the highway. It's faster because it's more direct. Turn right at the next traffic light. Hey, don't go so fast. Slow down!

George: Dad, the speed limit here is 70 kilometers per hour, and I'm doing 60.

Father: Be careful! You almost hit that car. You have to watch out for traffic.

Q1: Read the conversation, then answer questions below:

Sylvia: So, Karen, has your nephew left yet?

Karen: Yes, Greg has already gone. At long last!

Sylvia: How long did he stay?

Karen: Almost three months. He was doing a research project here at the university. When he arrived, I said, "Make yourself at home." And he did just that.

Sylvia: But he seemed like such a nice young man.

Karen: Oh, he is, and I was happy to help out. The trouble is that he took over our house. He used our things and never put them back. He never cleaned up after himself, and I've never seen anyone eat so much! One day I walked in the living room, and there was Greg eating and making a mess, with his feet on the furniture...

Sylvia: That's a bit too much, isn't it?

Q1: Read the following conversation, then answer the questions below:

Adel: What are you doing on the weekend?

Faisal: My plans are still up in the air. Sometimes there's nothing interesting to do, but this weekend I have three good choices. I don't know which one to do.

Adel: What are the three things? I might be able to help you make up your mind.

Faisal: OK. First, Fahd has just graduated from college, and he's invited me to dinner. If I don't go to Fahd's graduation, he's going to be very hurt. I'm one of his closest friends, you know. Second, Khalid invited me to spend the weekend at his family's house at the beach. Third, the Dubai Airshow is taking place, and Tariq asked me to go with him this weekend.

Adel: What's your preference?

Faisal: I'd much rather go to the airshow. If I don't go this weekend, I may not get another chance to see it.

Adel: It seems to me, you should do what you feel like doing. If you go to the airshow, explain to Fahd and Khalid why you're going. I'm sure they'll understand.

- What are Faisal's plans for the weekend? _____
- What are his choices? _____
- What will happen if he doesn't go to Fahd's graduation? _____

Q1: Read the dialogue, then answer questions below:

Will: So, what's it like living and working in China?

Edgar: Well, to be honest, in today's globalized world, there isn't really all that much difference anymore, especially in big cities like Shanghai, where I'm based. There's a lot of traffic, crowded subways and buses, tall skyscrapers, and modern shopping malls just like in other large cities around the world.

Will: Have any differences struck you?

Edgar: Well, the food is very different, and eating with chopsticks was tricky at first, especially rice and noodles. But I got the hang of it now.

Will: What about the language?

Edgar: Most of the people I work with speak English well. I'm still learning Chinese to handle everyday situations.

Will: Is there anything else you're not used to yet?

Edgar: No, I've adjusted to the way of life. However, there's still one thing that's kind of weird to me. In China, the family name comes before the first name, and millions of people have the same surname. For example, Wang, Li, Zhang, Chen, and so on are the most common.

Will: No kidding!

Edgar: Yeah, at work when I called out Zhou, three colleagues used to answer me. But I managed to solve the problem.

Will: What did you do?

1. What things does Edgar say are the same in Shanghai?
2. What's his conversational Chinese like?
3. What did Edgar find difficult at first?
4. What is unusual about Chinese surnames?

Q2: Make sentences. Use infinitives.
